

Do you travel on our buses during peak school time?

If you travel on our buses at school peak times, you will probably be used to sharing the bus with children and students travelling to and from school or college.

In these strange times, we need to try and help get our young people back to school and college, whilst keeping you safe as you travel. The guidance from the Department for Education is that students from the same school group do not need to be socially distanced from each other, so we will be using most of the seats in our buses. However, we do need to keep our regular passengers safe and we are designating Busy Bus Zones at the front of our buses.

These will normally be the first four rows on the lower deck.

Large stickers will be visible on the windows to help you find the zone and also to inform students travelling not to sit there. Schools have been contacted and advised of our plans. We will also be providing extra journeys for designated school groups and some larger buses to help people spread out more.

The Busy Bus zones are there to allow social distancing between post-college passengers and in those seats, the usual rules apply -

Please sit by the window and leave a space directly in front or behind you if you can.
